I.4	Regarding the use of personal data	The processing of personal data may only be carried out when this law or other legal provisions authorize it or the owner expressly consents to it. The person authorizing must be duly informed regarding the purpose of storing their personal data and its possible communication to the public. The authorization must be in writing. The authorization may be revoked, although without retroactive effect, which must also be done in writing. No authorization is required for the processing of personal data that comes from or is collected from publicly accessible sources, when they are of an economic, financial, banking or commercial nature, are contained in lists relating to a category of persons that are limited to indicating background information such as the individual's membership in that group, their profession or activity, their educational qualifications, address or date of birth, or are necessary for direct response commercial communications or direct marketing or sale of goods or services. Nor will this authorization be required for the processing of personal data carried out by private legal entities for their exclusive use, that of their associates and the entities to which they are affiliated, for statistical, pricing or other purposes of general benefit to them.	Functional	Intersects With	Data Subject Consent	PRI-03	Mechanisms exist to enable data subjects to authorize the collection, receipt, processing, storage, transmission, sharing, updating and/or disposal of their Personal Data (PD), where the data subject is provided, prior to collection, with: (1) Plain language explaining the potential data privacy risks of the authorization; (2) A means to decline the authorization; and (3) Necessary choice and consent-related criteria required by applicable statutory, regulatory and contractual obligations.	5

II	Regarding the rights of data subjects	N/A	Functional	No Relationship	N/A	N/A	N/A	0
II.12	Regarding the rights of data subjects	Every person has the right to demand from whoever is responsible for a bank, which is engaged in the public or private processing of personal data, information about the data relating to his person, its origin and recipient, the purpose of the storage and the identification of the persons or bodies to which his data are regularly transmitted. If the personal data is erroneous, inaccurate, ambiguous or incomplete, and this is proven, you will have the right to have it modified. Without prejudice to legal exceptions, it may also require that they be disposed of if their storage lacks a legal basis or when they are expired. The same demand for deletion, or blocking of data, as the case may be, can be made when you have voluntarily provided your personal data or it is used for commercial communications and you do not wish to continue appearing in the respective register, whether permanently or temporarily. In the cases mentioned above, the provision, modification, or deletion of data shall be entirely free of charge. Furthermore, upon request of the data subject, a copy of the altered record, including the relevant portion, must be provided. If further modifications or deletions of data are made, the data subject may also obtain a free copy of the updated record, provided that at least six months have elapsed since the previous instance in which this right was exercised. The right to obtain a free copy may only be exercised in person. If the personal data being cancelled or modified had been previously disclosed to specific or identifiable individuals, the data controller must notify them of the action taken as soon as possible. If it is not possible to determine the individuals to whom the data was disclosed, a notice must be posted that is generally accessible to those who use the information in the database.	Functional	Intersects With	Data Subject Empowerment	PRI-06	Mechanisms exist to provide authenticated data subjects the ability to: (1) Access their Personal Data (PD) that is being processed, stored and shared, except where the burden, risk or expense of providing access would be disproportionate to the benefit offered to the data subject through granting access; (2) Obtain answers on the specifics of how their PD is collected, received, processed, stored, transmitted, shared, updated and/or disposed; (3) Obtain the source(s) of their PD; (4) Obtain the categories of their PD being collected, received, processed, stored and shared; (5) Request correction to their PD due to inaccuracies; (6) Request erasure of their PD; and (7) Restrict the further collecting, receiving, processing, storing, transmitting, updated and/or sharing of their PD.	5
II.13	Regarding the rights of data subjects	The right of individuals to information, modification, cancellation or blocking of their personal data cannot be limited by any act or agreement.	Functional	Intersects With	Data Subject Empowerment	PRI-06	Mechanisms exist to provide authenticated data subjects the ability to: (1) Access their Personal Data (PD) that is being processed, stored and shared, except where the burden, risk or expense of providing access would be disproportionate to the benefit offered to the data subject through granting access; (2) Obtain answers on the specifics of how their PD is collected, received, processed, stored, transmitted, shared, updated and/or disposed; (3) Obtain the source(s) of their PD; (4) Obtain the categories of their PD being collected, received, processed, stored and shared; (5) Request correction to their PD due to inaccuracies; (6) Request erasure of their PD; and (7) Restrict the further collecting, receiving, processing, storing, transmitting, updated and/or sharing of their PD.	5

II.14	Regarding the rights of data subjects	If personal data is in a database to which various bodies have access, the owner may request information from any of them.	Functional	Intersects With	Data Subject Empowerment	PRI-06	Mechanisms exist to provide authenticated data subjects the ability to: (1) Access their Personal Data (PD) that is being processed, stored and shared, except where the burden, risk or expense of providing access would be disproportionate to the benefit offered to the data subject through granting access; (2) Obtain answers on the specifics of how their PD is collected, received, processed, stored, transmitted, shared, updated and/or disposed; (3) Obtain the source(s) of their PD; (4) Obtain the categories of their PD being collected, received, processed, stored and shared; (5) Request correction to their PD due to inaccuracies; (6) Request erasure of their PD; and (7) Restrict the further collecting, receiving, processing, storing, transmitting, updated and/or sharing of their PD.	5
II.15	Regarding the rights of data subjects	Notwithstanding the provisions of this Title, information, modification, cancellation or blocking of personal data may not be requested when this prevents or hinders the proper fulfillment of the oversight functions of the required public body, or affects the confidentiality or secrecy established in legal or regulatory provisions, the security of the Nation or the national interest. Nor may the modification, cancellation or blocking of personal data stored by legal mandate be requested, except in the cases contemplated in the respective law.	Functional	Intersects With	Usage Restrictions of Personal Data (PD)	PRI-05.4	Mechanisms exist to restrict collecting, receiving, processing, storing, transmitting, sharing and/or updating Personal Data (PD) to: (1) The purpose(s) originally collected, consistent with the data privacy notice(s); (2) What is authorized by the data subject, or authorized agent; and (3) What is consistent with applicable laws, regulations and contractual obligations.	5
II.16	Regarding the rights of data subjects	If the person responsible for the registry or database does not respond to the request of the applicant within two business days, or denies it for a reason other than the security of the Nation or the national interest, the data subject shall have the right to appeal to the civil court judge of the domicile of the person responsible, who is on duty according to the corresponding rules, requesting protection of the rights enshrined in the preceding article. The procedure will be subject to the following rules: If the reason given for denying the applicant's request is national security or national interest, the appeal must be filed with the Supreme Court, which will request a report from the relevant authority by the most expeditious means, setting a deadline for its submission. Once this deadline has passed, the Court will resolve the dispute. Any evidence received will be recorded in a separate, confidential file, which will retain that status even after the case is resolved if the applicant's request is denied by a final judgment. The Supreme Court chamber hearing the claim pursuant to the preceding paragraph, or the Court of Appeals chamber hearing the appeal, in the case of the procedure established in the first and second paragraphs, may, if it deems it appropriate or if requested with plausible grounds, order the case file to be brought before it to hear the parties' attorneys, in which case the case shall be added to the docket of the same chamber on an exceptional basis. In claims based on the grounds indicated in the preceding paragraph, the President of the Court shall order that the hearing not be public. If the claim is upheld, the same judgment will set a reasonable deadline for compliance with the decision and may impose a fine of one to ten monthly tax units, or from ten to fifty monthly tax units if it is an infringement of the provisions of articles 17 and 18.
